Don McMillan, Chaplain of the Portland Police Bureau, is Jim McClellan's guest today. As chaplain, his main job is crisis intervention. He stated that in Portland 1 million people are under stress due to crisis. Many are perpetrators of crime as well as victims. He said crime today has become more and more violent and more and more drug oriented. He gave suggestions as to how the community could help crisis intervention programs. Letting others know that crisis intervention is available to them is one way. Churches could provide a safe place for victims, provide support and role models for the youth as well as give the youth a place to play sports. He encouraged viewers to contact their Police Bureau and Fire Department to find out how they could help and give encouragement.

Host, Jim McClellan, welcomed Jessie Salgado, Director for Friendship Unlimited, House for Women. Friendship Unlimited is an outreach to the prostitute who desires to get out of the prostitution scene. Jessie discovered that many women in prison have a background of prostitution. Many of these women started out as a victim of crime with an abusive family background. She stated that most of the women they talk to on the streets do not want to be there but feel trapped. They help these women by inviting them to the house, feeding them, having them help with housework, and by supporting them in their education. They also share spiritual strength and God's healing power. She encouraged the viewers to help stop the cycle of prostitution by reaching out and loving them through meeting their needs.

He spoke of a 300% increase in the prison population with California state prisons numbering 24,000 inmates. The reason inmates go back to prison again and again is because they often accept their time serving as just part of life. Most have no home to go to so prison becomes their home with most of their physical needs met. He commented that the prison system never changes the heart of a man, but a commitment to Christ can. Once she started she was hooked, eventually getting into a $10,000 a day habit. She entered a rehab for 28 days but after she came out she started using again. A friend kept inviting her to go to church. She finally consented, was saved, but still couldn't quit drugs for more than three months at a time. Eventually she received deliverance and was asked by Athletes in Action to witness at the Olympics in Spain.

	Sheila Walsh welcomed David Toma, former police officer who is the author of "Turning Your Life Around". David tells teens at high schools the reality of drugs, alcohol and sex before marriage and what happens to your brain, your mind and your body. He is tough, straight-forward and tells it like it is. He said people are walking around with AIDS and other diseases because no one has the guts to stand up and say "stop"! He tells girls not to please anyone but themselves and that guys will try to con them.

	Rick Zenn from the World Forestry Center, was Jim McClellan's guest today. He spoke of the importance of trees and how we can protect them. Trees produce oxygen, house various animals and provide jobs. However, we are cutting down trees faster than ever before, resulting in our forests becoming deserts. Trees are also a good indication of pollution and we need to take care of our own trees as they are often neglected. Zenn suggested ways viewers can plant and care for their trees through proper pruning and watering.

	Jim McClellan and his guest, Dr. Jill Mellen from the Metro Washington Park Zoo, discussed the importance of animals to our environment. Dr. Mellen shared how in the past they took animals from the wild because there were plenty. Today, because of a lower population, zoo animals are 3rd and 4th generation. She stated that the spotted owl is now an endangered species and represents old growth forests and many other animals. She explained that Bio-diversity is a complex of species

	Dr. Whitaker and Dr Roy Fox from the Center for Health Care of the Elderly, Nova Scotia, and Russ Reiter, University of TX Health Science Center, discussed the strong effect the environment has on health in general and the aging process. In order to stay healthy we must maintain a healthy lifestyle and exercise, even when we get "older". We have the ability of self-management and can control our destiny.
	CALLING DR WHITAKER #513	27:45	21:00	N	PA/O	7-04-92 8:30A 7-05-92 11:00P
	Dr. Whitaker along with guest Dr Ronald Coleman, discussed the effects the environment has on our health. The things theat contain lead are paint in, older houses and schools, battery cycling plants and water, which once absorbed can cause various problems. A diet high in calcium and fiber may help this problem. Chemicals in our homes affecting our inside air also have an effect on us, like new carpet, pesticides absorbed in our food and the fact that much of our crops in America are grown in sub-standard soil. We can all be a little more conscientious and help our environment.

	Dr Whitaker reviewed the interviews with Dr Rae, Dr Rapp, and Mary Nash Stoddard from the past series of environmental health and medicine. What is inside our body creates the inner environment and what weakens our immune system is poor diet, toxic environments, polluted air, etc.

	Dr Whitaker welcomed guest, Dr Ronald Coleman, Environmental Epidemiologist at the University of Oklahoma. They discussed the effects chemicals have on our bodies and the different types. In 1950, one out of twenty females developed breast cancer and today it is one in nine, plus one person in four or five will develop cancer in their lifetime. We are exposed to over 2000 chemicals from our water, automobile fuel, foods, paints, etc. Lead, one of the most common, is very toxic and can affect the learning ability of a child; the effects are not reversible.
